

Biography

Alan Ables

Alan Ables served around the globe, from Asia to the Middle East, as a public relations adviser and speech writer at major military commands. After retiring from the Navy he continued writing for a number of print publications and the Associated Press. He was a consultant for LIFE Magazine during the first Gulf War. He also continued to write speeches for nearly a dozen admirals and generals, including the Air Force Chief of Staff.

His behind-the-scenes relationships with personalities ranging from U.S. Presidents to world-class entertainers has shaped his fiction.

Ables takes real events from recent and far-distant history and crafts them into fast-paced action/adventure stories.

Decades as a speech writer have shaped his writing style; readers are treated to a narrative that reads like the spoken word.
